- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

No significant precipitation is expected until the weekend into early next week. Until then, expect dry and warm conditions, with significant warming possible Monday and Tuesday, and perhaps a bit Wednesday as well. Overnight, fog and low stratus will be quite normal for many area valleys.

Eureka Weather:

A weakening front will bring light rain to portions of Northwest California through this evening. A drying and warming trend is expected early next week as high pressure rebuilds.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will strengthen over the Sierra and Western Nevada, bringing dry conditions through the work week. Above average temperatures today will ease down to near average Tuesday, then jump to well above average for Wednesday through Friday. The next chance for light precipitation will be Saturday.

Sacramento Weather:

Expect dry weather with above average daytime temperatures this week with some patchy morning valley fog.

San Francisco Weather:

A warming trend will begin to take place today and persist through midweek as high pressure builds along the West Coast. Dry weather conditions will also prevail through at least late week before a weak weather system approaches northern California Friday night into Saturday.

WEATHER

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather will continue for the next several days as a ridge of high pressure dominates the pattern. Except for areas of night and morning low clouds and fog in the San Joaquin Valley skies will be mostly clear through Thursday. A warming trend is expected through midweek with high temperatures averaging well above normal by Tuesday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

The warming trend will continue through Tuesday as offshore flow combines with building high pressure aloft. An approaching low pressure system will allow onshore flow and a cooling trend to develop later this week into next weekend.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

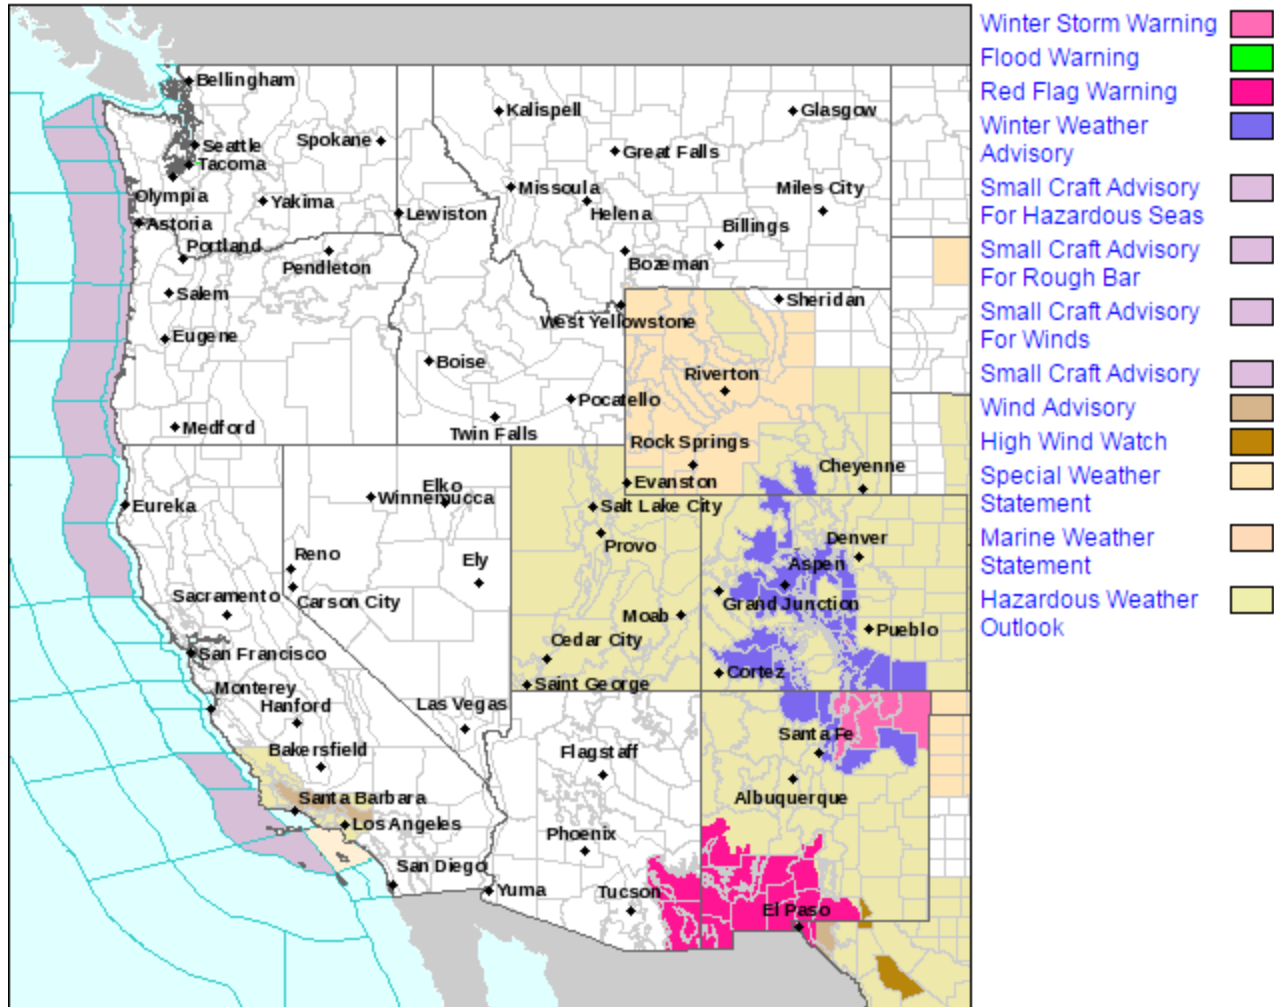

It will be fair and warmer this week as a ridge of high pressure dominates the weather pattern. A shallow marine layer will bring areas of low clouds and fog along the coast this morning. Gusty Northeast winds will develop through and below the passes and canyons and near the coastal foothills at times today through Wednesday. The warm days will continue through Friday before a low pressure trough arrives Saturday with cooler weather.

Southeast California Weather:

Another unseasonably warm day is in store but a dry cool front will lead to windy conditions by this afternoon. Behind the front temperatures will be significantly cooler Tuesday with highs on the lower deserts dipping below 80. Breezy to windy conditions continue Tuesday and Wednesday. High pressure rebuilds for warmer temperatures Thursday and Friday. High pressure will weaken next weekend but with only modest cooling anticipated.
